Not illustrated. 1884 Excerpt: . mean the words-- What a privilege to carry Everything to God in prayer! Do you? Is it your comfort and joy to pray? Do you rise from your knees glad with the consciousness of forgiveness when you have confessed and asked pardon for your sins? do you tell God of all your wants, and difficulties, and temptations, and look to Him for strength? do you turn to Him as your best and dearest friend? If you do, then indeed you know the privilege of carrying everything to Him in prayer. But I greatly fear that all do not. Perhaps not quite everybody present prays to Him at all; probably a great many more say their prayers in the sense of repeating hurriedly a form of words, to satisfy their consciences, but never entreat Him earnestly with their hearts. Oh! believe me, that kind of lip service is quite useless, those words have no power to reach so far as the throne of God; in His books you are entered on the same page as your neighbour, who goes to bed and rises up without praying at all. A young man in London once told me that he said his prayers regularly, night and morning. I am very glad to hear it, I replied, and what do you say? Sam paused a moment for recollection, and then rapidly gabbled through a strange jumble of perfectly meaningless syllables, which from a distant resemblance of sound, I supposed...
