Education and progress are practically synonymous terms. So, when it is proudly pointed out how Windsor has made such remarkable strides In the twenty-five years from 1892 to 1917, the anniversary just now being celebrated, it is meet and right that the schools should be accorded their share of credit and glory. Windsor is credited with having a good educational system in 1892, the year the town became a city, and the board of education, from year to year, has kept pace with the march of progress. It is true that at the present time there is a lack of school accommodation for the beginners. The congestion, however, is only temporary, plans being now in progress to make room for all by the time the schools reopen after the summer holidays. More than that, property is being purchased for a new school in the southern...
